Spencer's Wild Cat Will Enter Belle Vernon Races

Next Friday and Saturday, Aug. 27 and 28 will be the biggest day of the year at the Belle Vernon race track. Announcement has been made of a big two-day auto race meet in which some of the speediest cars and most sensational drivers in the country will be entered. There will be seven big events on the card each day and from all indications local track records will be broken.

Thus far five entries have been made and as many more are looked for within the next few days. The races will be run under the rules and with the sanction of the American Automobile Association which assures a fair open competition to anyone wishing to enter a car. The entries will close Wednesday, Aug. 25, at midnight. The prizes aggregate $1,500.

Drivers entered to date are as follows:

G. B. Gardner with his famous Beaver Bullet, which was the second American car to finish in the 1914 Indianapolis Sweepstakes. This racer is of his own construction and is considered one of the fastest cars on the half-mile dirt track in the world.

C W. Johnson of Uniontown with his Packard Greyhound, the car in which he defeated Ralph DePalma and a score of other fast cars from all parts of the United States on this year's Uniontown Hill Climb. Johnson has just recently taken to half-mile racing and has already won a half dozen races at Clarksburg, W Va., Altoona, Johnstown and other places.

I. P. Fetterman of Pittsburgh, with his big white Simplex in which he made two miles in a trial on a half-mile track last week in Johnstown in 2:20. On hte local track which is considered by Fetterman as better than the Johnstown oval, he expects to shoe something off of this time

A D Spencer, of Charleroi, with his Buick Wildcat. Spencer has his racer in excellent condition since rebuilding the motor following a smash up in the Altoona meet August 6-7. He has cut down his fly wheel several pounds which enables him to pick up speed without loss of time in coming out of the curves. Spencer believes with the changes in his car, he can keep a big end of the prize money close to home.

Anyone desiring to enter a car should make application to C. W. Hunter at the Wilbur Hotel, Charleroi.

Will Speak Here

Pastor John Hettenbaugh of Pittsburgh is to deliver a lecture next Sunday on the subject "The Time of the End;" not "The End of Time."

The lecture will be given at three o'clock in the afternoon at Kelly's hall, 524 Donner avenue.

The subject is a most interesting one to all Christian people, many of whom believe that we are now living in the time of the end, and some of our citizens who have heard Pastor Hettenbaugh speak in other cities assure us that any who attend will be well repaid for taking advantage of this opportunity to hear an able Bible student. His lecture teems with Scriptural quotations, sound reasoning and solid facts.

The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Monessen Branch, International Bible Students Association The Bible Students have regular weekly meetings for Bible study but recently have been requested to hold a series of lectures in order that their views of the Scriptures might be better understood by the Christian people of our city. They have now arranged for a series of meetings to be held Sunday afternoons, this being the first of the series.

All will be most cordially welcomed The lecture is absolutely free—no admission and no collection.

Monessen Mecca For Candidates

Th farmers of Rostraver township will have an opportunity of meeting the various candidates for county offices today at the annual grange picnic at McClain's grove near Smithton. This outing is an annual affair and farmers from miles around gather in the grove to enjoy the day with their neighbors. Good speakers will be on the platform for the afternoon and the hustling candidate will make his rounds among the picnickers soliciting their support at the coming primaries

Many of the candidates are taking this opportunity of paying their respects to Monessen, and yesterday, Harry S. Miller, the hustling young candidate for Recorder of Deeds, Dr. A. D. Miller of Manor, who aspires to the nomination for County Treasurer and Dr. W. J Potts of South Greensburg, who is after the nomination for Coroner were in town. A number of other candidates were here earlier in the week, and as the primaries draw near the town will be the mecca for the various candidates who have come to realize the importance of the large Republican vote in this, the largest town in the county.

Honest People?

Evidently the "losers weepers finders keepers" is the adage used by most of the residents of this town as numerous articles have been lost about town, but despite the fact that a diligent search was made and advertisements inserted in the newspapers, were never recovered. Many of the articles lost were of little value only to the owner, and in all cases their return would have meant a greater reward than the value of the lost article but nevertheless the finder seemed satisfied to keep the property. A few days ago a pocketbook containing a sum of money, the property of a poor woman was lost on the streets, but up until this time no trace of it has been found. The pocketbook was lost on Donner avenue and was in all probability found a few minutes after the loss was discovered.

Aged Woman Was Called By Death

Mrs. Margaret Collins, aged 82 years, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Ross at West Belle Vernon. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of her daughter, with Rev. J. M. Jamieson of the Monessen United Presbyterian church in charge. The interment will be made at Howe's cemetery, near Coal Centre.

The deceased is survived by five children, Mrs. Ross, with whom she made her home, Mrs. Lukens of Wireton and two daughters in Ohio, and one son, David Collins of Belle Vernon. Her husband died about 30 years oga

Mrs. Collins was born in Scotland and came to this country a number of years ago and for a time resided along the Allegheny river. About 25 years ago she moved to this section and lived for some time at Wireton with her daughter. She then moved to Gibsonton and kept house by herself until old age compelled her to return to her daughter's home in West Belle Vernon. She was the oldest member of the United Presbyterian church of this city and despite her age, was always active in church work.

Picnic At Home

For several years past the Business Men's association of Fayette City has taken the lead in planning an outing of some kind for the people and heretofore a boat or train has been employed. Many could not go on these thips, so this year they decided to have an old fashioned harvest home picnic in Lynn's Grove, a mile or so from town on the local street car line, on next Wednesday

Sports of all kinds will be a feature of the day and a corn roast will be indulged in. Extra fine prizes will be given to the winners of the different events and a valuable sewing machine will be given away on the grounds in the afternoon.

The Sunday schools will join in the days outing as will the entire farming community. The day is expected to be one of great enjoyment. If rain should fall sufficiently to mar the festivities, the outing will be held on the next day.

District Attorney Approves

News that stockingless bathing girls have appeared at the Charleroi beach has reached Washington, where some worry has been felt, and a question raised as to whether or not the feminine bathers might not be constrained by law to don more apparel. The Washington News says:

Although the district attorney of Allegheny county where the fair nymphs some time ago inaugurated the stockingless costume had no objections, the good citizens of Charleroi did not know how the Washington county district attorney might view the matter

When a reporter asked the opinion of District Attorney Richard G. Miller on the subject of stockingless gul bathers, the attorney was not a bit shocked although he was somewhat surprised. He did not know that the Charleroi girls were doing such a thing

"I have no objections," he said "No—I wouldn't say let them go as far as they like—but I don't know of any law which would prohibit their going bathing without stockings"

Sunnyside and Shadyside Will Play Next Wednesday

The Sunnyside and Shadyside base ball teams of Donner avenue will clash for the second time this season on next Wednesday evening at the Page grounds. These two teams met about a month ago and the Shadyside aggregation won out in an interesting contest

Guy R Eddy is the captain of the Shadyside team and Harry Lebowitz is the head of the Sunnyside team. All former stars and a number of "never-wasters" will take part in the game next Wednesday, and Manager Lebowitz states that with several reinforcements he is certain that his team will be returned winners on this occasion They are out to wipe away the stain of the former defeat and will leave nothing undone towards securing a victory.

Capt. Eddy is equally as confident of again taking over his opponents and stated that in all probability he would do mound duty for his teammates in order that the sting of defeat would be more severe. At any rate it promises to be a warm argument, for both teams are out for blood, and the spectators are sure to see a game of real base ball.

The proceeds will be donated to the local playgrounds fund and the public should turn out next Wednesday and assist this worthy cause. The playgrounds have closed with a slight shortage due to the fact that many improvements were made at all the grounds and the proceeds of the ball game will add materially in making up this shortage.

Now In Indiania

Anna Mayirnik, the 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mayirnik of 248 Rostraver street, who was reported yesterday as having been located in Canada, is now at the home of an aunt in Whiting, Ind. Mr. Mayirnik, the girl's father, received a letter from his sister at that place to that effect. The girl has only been there a short time and did not tell her relatives the reason she was making them a visit. She was dressed in a neat new outfit and had quite a sum of money remaining from the $125 she took before leaving here on August 9.

The father of the girl has written his sister and the girl will be welcomed back by the anxious mother who was rejoiced when news came that her daughter was in safe hands

Tax on Land Values

The Chicago Liquor Dealers' Protective association is a business organization that is remarkably well posted on the subject of taxation. In a recent letter to senators and congressmen, it opposed the levying of more taxes on liquor and indicated where taxes should be placed. It said:

"We also wish at this time to call your attention to a class of property that seems to have been treated with remarkable solicitude by congress. We refer to property in land. We cannot conceive of a fairer method to all classes than a tax on land values. In common with other business men we are the prey of the owner of land values, with this exception that we are generally charged 50 to 100 per cent. higher rents. It seems unfair to impose on the men of our nation who strive and work and hustle the entire tax burden and then allow those who reap the greatest income with the least effort to practically escape all national taxation. We, therefore, ask you to study the question of a tax on land values if it is found to be necessary to increase the national income.

"A tax of this kind will be opposed by all wealthy parasites, by all the great land holding corporations, but we do not think any objections which these interests may offer should be given much consideration by congress. Men who withhold useful land from use while hundreds of thousands of willing workers are unemployed, should not be exempted from their just share of taxation. A tax on land values would be fair to all, would be an inexhaustible source of all necessary revenue for the maintenance of our government and would be the means of giving employment to thousands of men by forcing into use an immense area of valuable land."

The Chicago Liquor Dealers' association should have the support of business men in other lines in its effort for just taxation. It is strange indeed that business men, supposed to be a particularly shrewd class, should be so slow to see a fact so plain as the burden imposed on business of all kinds by taxation of labor products and exactions of landlords. The liquor dealers' suggestion is one that can be consistently supported by temperance advocates and this support it should have.

SAM. CRAWFORD STILL WHALING 'EM OUT AT 35

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 20—Sam Crawford, of the Tigers' wrecking crew, is too busy whaling away at ball today to observe his 35th birthday. At a period in life when most basebal players are being relegated to the bench and the bushes, "Wahoo Sam" is going his best. With a pennant in sight, Sam and his famous side partner, Ty Cobb, have loomed up big this season in the Jennings outfit. For many seasons they have slugged their cheery way together. They are sure the goat getters of the American league pitchers.

Crawford got his nickname and much of his stamina from his birthplace at Wahoo, Nebraska. In his tender youth, Sam took to barbering. Betwen shaves he disported himself in the back yard with the boys of the neighborhood. Sam aspired to be a pitcher. He joined a barnstorming team and traveled through Nebraska. His friend, John McIlvaine came back to Nebraska with tales of the big leagues. Crawford begged his friend to take him back with him in the spring to the Canadian League. Sam landed in Chatham, Ont., where he hit for .370 in 1898. Columbus, O. secured him the following year. That autumn Cincinnatti secured Crawford. Sam jumped to Detroit in 1901 and there he has remained. And you can stack any kind of a bet that Hughey Jennings is not counting the days of his future usefulness.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

THE BROKEN COIN

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by

GRACE CUNARD

COPYRIGHT, 1915, BY WRIGHT & PATTERSON

These strange words suddenly brought Kitty back to a train of thought which for the time had been broken She felt quickly at her bosom and at her waist for the bit of coin which she had brought away from Count Frederick's room It was gone! At some time during her journey from Count Frederick's palace to this place—long or short whether it had been, she could not tell—the coin had been taken from her

Kitty sprang to the sill of the little window and peered out for an instant; but her hold was too feeble She sank back, not seeing what would have given her great joy to see.

Apparently some eye had caught sight of her face, brief as had been its appearance In truth, Roleau, hound like, had run his game to earth It was he who had caught sight of her just for an instant Later she heard once more the tinkling of some falling object upon the floor She picked it up—it was a substantial file, which evidently had been flung through the window by someone having the intent to aid her This thought gave her hope Almost as soon as she grasped it she fell to work at the bars which had restrained her.

Meantime, at the scene from which she had been so unceremoniously abstracted but now, Count Frederick remained still pondering on the strange events which had been brought home so close to him. He was too much preoccupied in his concern over the young woman's disappearance to note carefully anything else that went on about him When one of his household placed a message in his hand, for the time he gazed at it, scarce comprehending that it came from the royal palace

Since he had left unattended the servant of Count Sachio, whom he had found in his own room, the latter seized the present opportunity to escape from the place and to find his own master, Count Sachio himself—who waited for him impatiently enough at the rendezvous which had been established

"Well, well, then, Bartel," exclaimed the count, "why the delay? What's wrong? You are not going to tell me the same story that Rudolph brought—you have not failed?"

The shamefaced look of the other gave him his own answer. Count Sachio himself gave way to hearty curses of all incompetence

"The count retained one half the coin," went on the unfortunate messenger "I don't know which it was The girl—the young American—got the other piece I saw her pick it up But she did not get both! I don't know which one she did get, but I know that each has one-half—the count and the girl. She must have been carried away by some other man. I heard her scream, then all was silent."

"So all escaped you? It is another matter what I myself may have done as to the girl and the coin—they escaped you?"

"Yes, excellency, naturally I could not prevent the man from escaping, and the count himself allowed the other man to do so"

"What other man?"

"Roleau, they called him—the girl's servant—he follows her like a dog—and fights like one"

"So, there were two others present beside yourself?"

"Yes, it seemed as though everyone interested in the coin came all at once"

"Naturally, the competition asks quick work of all of us And we will act quickly. Tell me, what happened then?"

"The Count Frederick allowed her to escape—strangely, he seemed to have small resentment for her after all. Nor did he have too much for Roleau, whom he must have ranked a wholly faithless servant He did not punish him—but even sent him off after the girl! Excellency, my word for it, he seemed to miss the girl as much as the coin—did Count Frederick"

Follow them then, Bartel Follow Roleau—if you can find him—he will lead you to the girl, wherever she may be. For myself, I cannot guess"

It was this counsel, followed diligently by the unhappy messenger of Count Sachio, which resulted in a quick shifting of the forces of Kitty's enemies It was true Roleau had gained access to a point within sight of Kitty's window, where still he tried to be of aid to her—still hoped she soon would be able to aid herself But here he was surprised by these emissaries of Count Sachio—it was none less than the nobleman himself who led the forces now

Therefore when, after all her toil, Kitty at length managed to make her escape through the barred window, it was but to find herself once more a prisoner—Roleau once more a prisoner with her! The fact of captivity had not changed—only the phases of captivity. She and her ally had only exchanged captors Who her last prison guardian had been Kitty could not tell. Now, without doubt, she was once more to be subjected to the scant courtesy of the nobleman of Grahoffen.

An Old Woman Came in Bringing Some Food for Her.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Counterfeit Coin.

Count Frederick finally aroused himself from the apathy of inaction in which Kitty's sudden disappearance had left him Now he learned that the message from the king asked his attendance at the palace as soon as might be The king had, it seemed, a communication which he desired to make to Count Frederick at once.

"Confound his royal highness!" exclaimed Frederick to himself. "I never leave him but he asks me back at once. He is always in some trouble, and I am ill-disposed now to be nurse to any king, for I have affairs of my own to trouble me sufficiently."

Nevertheless, grumbling, he went his way to the palace, for the royal will was something not yet at least to be set aside.

"Good! Count Frederick," Michael greeted him. "I asked your return because of a sudden thought that had come to my mind"

"As to what, your majesty? Did it come to you alone, unassisted?"

The king was too much preoccupied to concern himself with sarcasm

"Yes, assuredly It is regarding the coin"

"The coin! I thought your majesty cared little for it—so little that you gave it away unasked to one who is not even of our country—a stranger—the young American"

"Precisely That is true And I had cause for my act. But, see you, one does not make gifts unrequited Now the young American has disappeared, and so has the coin Perhaps, rather, I should reverse that and say that the coin has disappeared and with it the young American. At least, that is to say—they both are gone So I sent for you, my dear Frederick to tell me what to do"

The nobleman stood for a moment but half concealing his real feelings gauging the man before him, this imitation of a king.

"She was a most charming young person," began the king, trying to conceal his own thoughts Do you not think such hair as hers is rare?'

'Rare indeed, your majesty—she is in all things rare," suddenly exclaimed the count

"And where is she gone?"

"I do not know—I have no idea"

"But you can find her—you certainly can bring her back"

"I hope it, your majesty—I hope it very much But then, as to the coin?" he added, somewhat maliciously—for he knew well enough where sat the wind in royal quarters

"Oh, yes, about the coin Well, I was only going to ask you to find it for me"

"That seems simple, your majesty' Even though I do not know where the young girl is"

"That is why I ask you, my dear count"

"Agreed then, your majesty. Of what use is a servant of the king if he cannot do the king's will? I accept your errand I will soon return to you the coin—at least, I hope so After all, perhaps it has no such value as you seem to think—I am sure it has less value for you than other things that we might mention."

Count Frederick did not add aloud what was in his own mind—the truth—that the coin had more value for him than he at any time before now had believed.

Presently he excused himself from the royal presence and departed to put into effect a little plan of his own which he fancied might blunt both horns of this dilemma into which the naivete of King Michael so suddenly had placed him.

As luck would have it, there had been thrown into his hands the king's half of the coin

Count Frederick thought for a moment before he made a plan. Then he made a hurried journey to a certain silversmith in whose skill he had much confidence.

"Make me," he said as he laid upon the counter his piece of the coin—"a replica of this—absolutely, line for line, so that I myself cannot tell the two apart. Do you hear me? Can it be done?"

"Yes, excellency," said the workman, "it can be done—so nicely that I myself scarcely could tell them apart"

"Then quick with it," said Count Frederick "How soon?"

"By tomorrow, excellency, I promise you a duplicate."

It was therefore on the morrow that Count Frederick was able once more to visit the royal palace with a mind more at peace with circumstances. With him he carried what was apparently the king's half of the coin which he had given to the young American so carelessly, and which now at once he coveted again—since the young American herself was gone

"So soon!" exclaimed Michael "You are the acme of punctiliousness and efficiency, my dear count. You are indeed a man of results Go now to my cabinet again and help yourself to such jewels as you fancy."

"No more, your majesty. I thank you If I have been of service I am pleased Jewels are not for me. They are for women—and no woman has jewels from me now I have reformed, your majesty I shall be taking myself to a monastery next."

King Michael laughed loudly at this jest on the part of his former boon companion "Not so far as that for me," he said. "I am not yet ready for any monastery I swear I can remember a queen's face and a queen's figure when I see them, well as ever. And I saw them both here not so long ago I thought I had secured the chance to see them yet again—when I gave her as our gift this which you have restored to me now. It seems I failed in that But should the same case come up again for action—should she by intent or accident meet us again—I am in possession once more of what formerly was mine. Perhaps the affair could be undertaken de novo, my dear count. She gave it to you to return to me? Well, no matter, only I hope that in some way, on some day, she will come back again"

"I trust it, your majesty," said Count Frederick fervently, and the deluded monarch, pleased at the quick execution of his wishes, knew nothing of the deeper machinations of the keen brain which he fancied still was in his service,

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Means to an End.

Kitty, left alone once more, found herself in better heart than she had been out now. At least, she had seen Roleau—had found once more proof of his faithfulness and his efficiency Surely he would help her to escape yet again And as for Sachio—better he of whom she knew something, than a stranger of whom she knew nothing at all Of late despair had been knocking at her heart in such fashion that the summons of opportunity found no hearing, but now she began to plan once more

She sought to study the exits of the apartment in which she found herself There were two doors, so it seemed, both fastened She pushed strongly at one, it opened before her. She stood once more face to face with Count Sachio, the mocking conspirator who had of late had so much to do with her own misfortunes!

"Mademoiselle!" said he, "I am so pleased."

"For myself," rejoined Kitty indignantly, "I was never so much displeased as I am now So the gentlemen of this country in this way show their quality—in their treatment of women? I compliment you."

"Your words are at least better than your absence, mademoiselle—I like neither"

"And what of me? What shall I say of a man who treats me as a criminal? Nay, a criminal would be treated better in my country—he would have a trial There would be process of law, observance of the law. Is the habeas corpus writ a thing unknown in this country—have the people never yet wrung that right from the hands of tyrants? In my country there are some recourses which any citizen may take."

"Not our own country? Why did you ever leave it, mademoiselle?"

"The reasons concern me alone, sir"

'Indeed, you mistake—they do not concern you alone We are many of us in this country also concerned with them. We would that you never had come from America. There are many reasons moving to that. And, indeed we even ask your return to your own country."

"So, then, it was your message to me that I got? Most melodramatic of you, Count Sachio—but by what right do you demand my return?"

"There are some large rights, mademoiselle, which need small explanation."

"But which allow you to hinder me in the performance of my own duties—to ask me to be unfaithful to my employers? Why, you even ask me to deceive the public—to present a counterfeit—to pretend that I have done what I have not done"

"So? And you cannot take such good advice?"

"No, I will not To deceive, to pretend, to counterfeit—those are attributes of your kingdom not of my own country America. In my country we have better standards—men and women alike—for which I heartily am glad"

"You have a stinging tongue, mademoiselle,' said Count Sachio, red under his swarthy skin. "Perhaps it will grow milder if left unused I shall leave you here—until you are willing to say you are done with Gretzhoffen and ready to return to your own country. This land, mademoiselle, can keep its own secrets—it could even close over the secret of the disappearance of a young woman—and leave her fate a mystery I trust that you will reconsider what you have said' A moment and he had left her once more Before he passed through the door she glanced beyond. The room was occupied, apparently, by his friends—escape on that side was impossible

The other door still remained fastened. Kitty turned to it with burglarious intent—using an art learned when she was a schoolgirl With no better instrument than a hairpin, she had seen wonders done at opening locks

Her brisk interchange of compliments with Count Sachio had set her pulses stirring once more She wanted to get out—she wanted to escape and she proposed to escape. Once more free, she admitted to herself, she would be willing enough to take the advice which but now she had scorned—willing enough to take ship back home, to see the familiar skyline of her own city, to find her own place back in the smoky and grimy city, her own place in the hum and grind of the old newspaper. How good it would seem to her now to see the faces of the local room They might chaff her all they liked Yes she would go back home

And now, with schoolgirl finesse in the employment of the small instrument at her disposal, she succeeded in her burglary. She felt the lock turn at last—felt it give—saw that she could open the door She did open it—and closed it again

Back of her she heard once more the creak of the other door as it opened She turned—to encounter once more the figure of Count Sachio He smiled at her as once more he entered unannounced

Newspapers Endorse Cremer's Candidacy

Edward A. Cremer is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Register of Wills. He has served an apprenticeship as Deputy Register, and, by reason of his efficiency, his candidacy has been endorsed by practically all of the members of the Bar. Following the announcement that he would seek the nomination, many newspapers commented on his candidacy. These comments came unsolicited on his part and indicate the manner in which his efficiency is regarded by those familiar with the workings of the Register's office. Some of these comments are in part as follows:

Mr. Cremer had much to do with establishing the present excellent system in the Register's office. An office of the greatest importance, affecting every person who owns property in the county, it not only has to do with the settlement of estates but concerns title to real estate as well. It is an office that requires at its head a person who has had experience in these matters—Greensburg Morning Review, March 15, 1915.

Mr. Cremer has had ample experience which fits him admirably for the office to which he aspires.—Greensburg Daily Tribune, March 15, 1915.

The office of Register of Wills is of great importance and affects every person who owns property in the county. To render good service to the taxpayers it requires an experienced head. Attorneys are particularly interested in Cremer's behalf inasmuch as they transact much business in this office, and his knowledge of the work would add greatly to the efficiency of the office.—Jeannette News, March 16, 1915

Edward A. Cremer has announced as a candidate for the office of Register of Wills He should have it without a dissenting voice. He is of the right stamp. Strong, courageous and straightforward in his business methods, he has proved himself abundantly fit, physically and mentally, for such a position of trust. The voters of Westmoreland County can make no mistake by placing Mr. Cremer in the office to which he aspires His knowledge of the affairs of that office now, his ever readiness to oblige and his courteous bearing to all taxpayers or others who have business to do with the legal affairs of that office only intensify the need of such men of his stamp as necessary to the welfare and betterment of county affairs —Pennsylvania Argus, March 17, 1915.

Mr. Cremer has been in the Register of Wills' office as Deputy and is thoroughly conversant with its management. Much of the success of this important office has been due to his methods and courteous dealings with the public.—Scottdale Independent, March 18, 1915.

Mr Cremer is widely known throughout the county and he will make a strong candidate. He is an accommodating official and knows the office from A to Z.—Irwin Republican-Standard, March 19, 1915.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 21—The Attorney General Horace W. Davis has renderd an opinion for Dr. Joseph H. Kalbfus, secretary of the State Game Commission to the effect that the act prohibiting unnaturalized foreigners from owning dogs does not apply to household pets and puppies. He points out that the intent of the act is to protect the game of the state.

Important

We have succeeded in securing the exclusive agency for the newly discovered PO-TASA-Fras treatment which is meeting with such marvelous success in the treatment of Lung Troubles asthma and Bronchitis. It is prepared under the personal supervision of Prof. Geo. B. Kaufman, of Columbus, Ohio, who is recognized as being one of the greatest drug chemists in America. The treatment acts by building up and not by stimulating and contains no injurious or habit forming drugs. One treatment usually convinces the most skeptical. We will be pleased to give you full particulars.
